Comprehension

Read the following passage and answer the questions given below:

The examination system is both an opiate and a poison. It is an opiate because it lulls us into believing that all is well when most is ill. 'Look,' the public says, 'at this list of scholarships; see how many children have got their School Certificates: something is happening; the school is doing its job.' Something no doubt is happening; but it may not be education: it may be the administration of a poison which paralyses or at least slows down the natural activities of the healthy mind. The healthy human being finding himself a creature of unknown capacities in an unknown world, wants to learn what the world is like, and what he should be and do in. To help him in answering these questions is the one and only purpose of education.

Question Description
